love her, too, with all my heart, that ti - ny lit - tie miss. . . . There's noth - ing tell of Cin - der - el - la, and her crys - tal slip - per, too, . . . And wide her to me sweet - er than my dar - ling's lov - ing kiss, . . . And when I near my eyes with won - der grow at what the fair - ies do, . . . In years when she's reach'd cot - tage home, I see that ba - by face, . . . Press'd a - gainst the win - dow wo - man - hood, Al - tho' I'll love her still, . . . I'll ne'er for - get her ba - by pane, a bright - er frame 't would grace, . . . She's wait - ing there for pa - pa, and her eyes light days, and how my heart would thrill, . . . And when in ev'ning I re - turn from traf - fic's up with glee, . . . I'm hap - py when I en - ter, for I'm al - ways sure to see. . . bu - sy whirl, . . . I'll miss that child-ish greet-ing of my lit - tle ba - by girl. . .

CHORUS.

Two lit - tle eyes shining bright - ly, Two lit - tle hands up - rais'd. . . Two lit - tle feet tripping light - ly From the win - dow, out which she gaz'd. . . Two lit - tle lips smiling sweet - ly, show lit - tle teeth of pearl, . . . That's how my dar - ling greets me, My lit - tle ba - by girl. . .
